There are large, dry, and very commodions brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels bave free use of for cargo while discharging. The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves. Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) s guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie bire discharging alongside is less. There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh souls on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of

As the Shoho and the dinolywallah, were dancing - a dance of delight around the bodies of the fedlen monsters, a third elephant, an old bull, id made at them, "gallowing like a raceborse and decreaming formuly." the Shoho shricking at "Abiet, abiet, mandelli," which, being interet preted, means "Lord master, save me," ran straight up to Mr. Boustead, bringing theinfuriated brute upon him, and in passing accidentally 3 knocked that gentleman down with the butt of a spare rifle be was carrying, and nearly fractured his skull. Mr. Boustead, nothing dounted, arose. and calmly planted an Enfold-sized bullet." also from his "double Mortimer," through the sleplant's brain, at a distance of five varde. The animal felt dead at two paces from this spot on which the adventagons hunter, was standing, and rolled over a tremendous precipice, carrying away large trees in his fall as if they had been rotten reeds. No sooner had this feat been achieved than a fourth elephant entered on the scene, " blowing and trimpeting os hideously." It was received by the undaunted and unerring practitioner at twenty-five paces "with a heavy balk in the head, very high This having no effect on it, a second barrel was administered "rather low," and its course was for a moment checked. But on came the wounded brute again. The Shoho and the dhooly wallah ng. bad by this time bolted, ash-coloured with affright, and Mr. Boustead stool alone. He is motioned to the cowards to toss him a loaded the rifle from the high rocks on which they had taken refuge. The rest of the story shall be ed told in his own words. Sit Samuel Baker never. shot closer or more accurately, or depicted his ive it down, and I cought it in the vir as it felt, nd gave the election a No. 12 through the houlder, which disabled him: He tried to get . for up to the path where I was standing, bu umbled back, and in his rage commenced smashing to pieces everything in his way, making fearful noises. It was a rare sight to witness his wonderful strangth; he bore down trees of considerable thicknessby sheerstrength and weight of body, and smashed their branches my into thousands of atoms. Every bit of jungle was knocked to smithereens and trampled to pieces all around him; and his vain endeavours rs to get at us and his terrible rage at heing foiled. ble were really most exciting to witness. He

nearly succeeded in getting up the incline to bis where I was, when I gave him the last bullet I may had. His legs give way, he staggered back one his hocks, and then rolled over heavily with a terrible groon. I can assure you I was thankful is when it was all over, and that I was out of the row so well." The lifth elephant appears to have escaped with its life. Sir Walter Raleigh These rural allurements failed to detain him long from court, to which a magnet of the most function power now drew him. This was the has levely Elizabeth Throgmorton, an orchan of the rarest attractions, whose virtue, devotion. and misfortunes shed a lastre over the close of he the sixteenth century. Her first appearance, ger bowever, in Raleigh's biography boded anything ne- but an envisble fame. Their intercourse, clandestine and illicit, soon became visible to the keen eyes of envy, upon which seandal made itself busy with the lady's reputation. For a while, dread of Elizabeth's tempestuous anger, he | coupled with unwillingness to provoke Raleigh's resentment, restrained the courtiers from and withdrawing the veil from this perilous amour, because they know that Raleigh's ank Panoma expedition, upon which he must soon and put out to sea would afford them ample opporout tunities of effecting his ruin. The Throguerton, of probably in her twenty-third year, was a tall woman, with light hair, large blue eyes, and fine oval features. Her portrait, seemingly the only had onetaken of her, has never come under my observahis tion, neither does any engraving appear to have ife? been made of it. I shall, therefore, borrow nty, Oldy's description, which conveys a clear idea of her appearance and costtime:-"She has on," d he says, "a dark-coloured, hanging-sleeve robe, to tufted on the arms, and under it a close-bulied ring gown, of white satin flowered with black, with close eleeves down to the wrist; has a rich ruby in her car, bedropt with large pearls; a lacce which rising above the shoulders, her bosom n. uncovered, a jewel hanging thereon, with a large chain of pearl round her neck down to her icky waist." How, or by whom the discovery of Raleigh's love for her was made, no one has n as a friend without, which evidently alludes to it. "S. W. R." the writer says, " has been too intimate with one of Her Mujesty's maids: I fear and to say who; but if you should guess at B. T. you aria may not be far wrong. The matter bath only now with | been apparent to all eyes, and the lady bath been own sent away; but nobedy believes it can end there. S. W. R. hath escaped from London for a time; be will be specially sent for and gard for a time; be will be speedily sent for and tibe brought back, where what awaiteth him nobody and. knoweth save by conjecture." Tucze is a Fravidence that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them as we may. So it was with Raleigh: this wrong act, through he influence of a benignant Nomesis, proved a far greater blessing to him than all the right acts he ever performed; his successes in war or ambition, the Queen's favour, his opuleuce. his faute, were more dross compared with Throgmorton's undying love; which clung blim in the Tower, in absence and death; and survived till she took her place beside bim n the grave. Yet, at the outset, Raleigh's conduct was not such as to entitle him to so true a love; leaving her to face alone the scoffs of malice and the derision of the base, he proceeded on his expedition, and wrote to Sir Robert Cecil from Chatham :- "I mean not to come away, as they say I will, for fear of a marriage and I know not what If any such thing were. I would have imparted it to yourself before any man living; and therefore I prav you not, and I beseech you to suppress what mire you can any such mallelons report. For the face of the earth that I would be fastened nato." Here he distinctly denies that any private instruge had taken place, and affirms, with still greater vehemence, that there existed no woman whom he desired to marry. His connection, therefore, with Elizabeth Trogmorton was a seduction and an desertion - Life of Sir Walter Raleigh, 1657-1691; By James Augustus St. John, just published. A NEW FORM OF PETTY LARGERY -- A cheerful Arab has just been tried at Tiaret for or a triffing crime. He and a friend had only tage | murlered two girls, of twelve and fifteen years of age, in order to stent their clothes. The Arab evidently thought that this was "perty he larcony," and a crime hardly worth being tried for. When asked if he was not an escaped conviet, he providly replied, "Yes, M. le Juge, I attendance on the Toulon police, just for having killed my wife!"
